

The Texas Middle School Fluency Assessment (TMSFA) was not researched in a large print format or field tested on students with very low vision. Although the norms do not simply extrapolate, the TMSFA can still be used to obtain instructional information for planning interventions with students who have low vision.